SABBATH DESACRATION.

To the Editor of the Tribune.—In one of the items of yours correspondent from this Reserve he refers to base ball playing on Sunday and states that the off day is another "cyle" of the Sabbath, as if he were responsible for acts of altars transgressors.

In the first place those who are about to break the law generally manage to evade the eye of the Master, and they do only know that they are disobeying his instructions, but we are sure that he will make a complaint to those authorities to punish.

The duty of a missionary is to convert, and the off day is another "cyle" of the Sabbath.

During my former incumbency of this Parish, when there were no legal officials off day, I did what I could to teach my people to "Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy." I am sure that if I succeeded in doing this I did the same.

I have returned after an absence of 15 years. Since I have renewed my efforts in that direction, and the Mohawks are going to a broader field of usefulness, I am sure that the Mohawks will succeed in doing this.

Clergymen who have authority to compel their people to observe the Sabbath, should have the power to enforce the laws and make his complaints to them.

I am, Dear Sir,
Yours truly,

G. A. ANDERSON,
Missionary to the Mohawks,
Mohawk Parsonage, July 3rd, 1888.

THE CATECHIST'S TOME.

The Tribune has on several occasions drawn attention to the neglected condition of the tomb of that godly man, Mr. John Hill, at one time Catechist to the Mohawks of the Bay of Quinte. For many years he labored among the people and did deeds of great worthiness, but his word was not always kept.

His son John succeeded him as catechist and finished before his death a revised edition of the Mohawk Prayer Book.

Another son Isaac John Hill also labored for several years among the Mohawks, and to their labor as catechists, the Mohawk nation are also indebted, to these men for considerable grants of land which they deeded to the Mohawk nation. These facts are probably unknown to the present generation of Indians. Now, as far as we know, nothing more need be said to emphasize the necessity of taking prompt action towards placing the tomb in a more creditable condition. We append a few notes taken from the Church Register, the entire record being left to Mr. Collins at one time Missionary to the Mohawks.

Eleazar Hill, wife of John Hill, Sr., of the Mohawks, aged 48 years, died on seventh of May, 1840, and was buried on tenth following by me, Buried John Hill, aged 32 years, who died in the month of February, 1847.

Norway—John Hill, was the son and successor of John Hill, who died in 1840, and who had served as Catechist to the Mohawks for the long period of 30 years.

The deceased, his eldest son, was a young man, and had a very good character. He had made remarkable advances in knowledge and from his diligent and virtuous course of life promised to be a marked character among his people. He was highly esteemed by a very large number of persons among whom he labored.

He finished shortly before his death a revised and complete edition of the Mohawk Prayer Book published at the expense of the New England Co., at Hamilton, and it was thought on his return from that city to the Mohawk country, that he would expose a cold which brought on consumption of which indeed it was seen there was a hereditary taint in his family. It terminated fatally on the 13th February, 1847. His loss was severely felt by the tribe and neighborhood. He left one brother Isaac the last of the family.

VICTORIA AND HER FAMILY.

BY C. T.

In June, 1852. In the gallery of the alcove at Hampton Court is a picture both of England, signed Lucas von Herre. The Flemish painter represents the great Queen, holding in her right hand the globe, draped in a white robe, with a crown on her head, advantage her splendid figure, and gazing with supreme disdain upon Venus, Juno and Minerva, [as one would say]: "Who are ye, footnotes to me?"

The Queen, and the three gods, partake hide in confusion their diminished heads, as though to reply: "Nothing much speak of, please your Majesty." The painter has done his best to do justice to the physical beauty of England's throne, Victoria, Empress of India, and senior member of European royalty, pretend to resemble her who has left such imperious marks upon the British Empire. And the three gods, in their portraits, stand in confusion, as you are aware, has always been next to England, the Duke of Kent, was of Hanoverian stock; he had his son and husband, Prince Albert, whence it happens that, during his reign, she could not do too much for the Saxe Coburgs, but for the last year or two, she has given preference to Darmstadt, whose young espoused in 1852 the Queen's second daughter, the Princess Alice, who died in 1858, leaving five children. "You will marry her sister," quoth the Queen, and the grand Duke, who had done his duty if there had not been in the way that British law, which says: "Thou shalt not wed thy deceased wife's sister." Abrogated that law, said the Queen, and the Duke of Cambridge, who had done his duty if there had been no such law, in 1852, when the Houses of Lords refused acclamation, and the peers were firm, and the Grand Duke of Hesse did not marry the Princess Beatrice, and those who were twenty-eight and Victoria aged twenty-four. In the first, a miniature by Thomson, we see her with the Prince Albert in arms, in the type of naval uniform substituted for the uniform, at least so her betrothal would be qualified if she were not the sovereign of a great nation. In the second, painted, I believe, from a photograph, she is seated on a garden bench with the Prince and the group reminds one of those other groups which you can see and buy every afternoon in the English galleries, and on holiday, as the story is clear at Rothenburg Garcia. As the chronicler from whom I quote remarks, "Juno, Venus, and Minerva would have no apprehension about the judgment of Paris in face of such a rival."

Queen Victoria is not only a woman, she is a woman of the world, she certainly commands respect, and she is unparalleled in her jealous anxiety to aggrandise the family of which she is the chief and increase the prestige of her country. She has been called "The Queen of All the Britons." She is monarch. She has more than once outwitted Bismarck and caused to pale before her the Emperor William of glorious memory. "Perhaps she is all of that, and perhaps it is not so much one thing as certain, when reason of State and policy and all obstacle, she dismises none of her sentiments; she dismises, but speaks out her mind freely without a care for what others may think, all of which is characteristic of her, and which is not to be despised or藐视ed; so when one is not so; as poor Lady Flora Hastings found to her cost, when Victoria was merely a girl. However, in any case, this peculiarity has its advantages, and enemies know exactly what they have to expect when they come across her."

The Col. Baker has only himself to thank if he died in exile; he knew that his sovereign was inflexible in questions of morals and manners. Prince Albert was her idol, yet the Prince was obliged to leave England, and the Queen, who made him understand very soon that, after all, he was nothing save her reflection, and the Consort never repeated his attempt to get out of bondage, when, after staying too late and getting too jolly at the banquets of some London guild, he found the gates of Buckingham Palace closed for the night.

CLOSED FOR THE NIGHT.

And was not the hospitality of a friend in chambers. Still, she did adore her husband, and was so inconsolable after his death that the report of his intended abdication was circulated, and that lively Radical Sir Charles Dilke, in 1851, offered the alternative of reigning ostentatiously, or of passing the hand—the Crown to the heir apparent. When, a dozen years later, Gambetta's friend became Under-Secretary of State at the Foreign Office under Mr. Gladstone, he formed a plan to make her Majesty not only very much disposed to reign and show herself in public, but very outspoken also in her regrets to have been forced to part with Lord Beaconsfield, the person for whom, after her marriage, her heart had been won, the same kind of affection. In her heart Queen Victoria is a dyed-in-the-wool Conservative; she supports the Liberals only because she is a constitutional sovereign.

Rank, birth and social position have no influence with her likes and dislikes; Prince and peasant have equal claim to her consideration if the one or the other has merited her confidence, and every one must remember how ever her own children were she was fond of them, and how the political question involved—the authority of John Brown, that Highland gibl whomever the caprice of a moment attached to her house held as a simple valet during her excursion to the New Zealand company of the Prince Consort. But if the Queen's "difficulties" were freely manifested, as Louis Philippe had cause to feel in 1848, Her Majesty gave an asylum to the runaway Orleans Princess, but she said openly that the revolution which

SENT THEM INTO EXILE.

Was their punishment for the disgraceful, difficult, and cowardly the Tuilleries in the case of the Spanish Queen?

Another object of her antipathy is Mr. Gladstone, although he has been half a dozen times her Prime Minister and may be again. Yet her repugnance is nowhere so strongly manifested as toward the French. Not so much, perhaps, as is natural to those of us, taste, fashions, and customs, and above all their women and theatres, which to her mind represent the abomination of indecency and iniquity. She used to come over when Mr. Gladstone, or Mr. IL, who was the arbiter of Europe's destinies, but it was always against her will, in obedience to the commands of her husband, to whom she was still living, as a French humorist remarks.

"The royal family of England is as fertile in olive branches as her school is rich in oak trees, and she is fed with a diet which haunts, and she has eight and married seven of them having children, so that her Majesty has quite a little army of Princes and Princesses, children and grandchildren in the London, & at Darmstadt, Berlin—indeed, strong contingents of the upper grand-grandchildren, who flourish like young bay trees. More than half of this family, inclusive of the male and female consorts of her children, reside in England on pensions "from a grateful and admiring people," the balance is spotted about in Germany, yet,

THOUGH LOST TO DIURNAL VISION,

It is the lone dear to memory, and is quite under the royal bough, spite of matrons, as all have come to be, who mate do not precisely as her Majesty likes, she makes her relatives a flying visit and after a short private conversation the most recalcitrant of them, as you are aware, has always been next to England, the Duke of Kent, was of Hanoverian stock; he had his son and husband, Prince Albert, whence it happens that, during his reign, she could not do too much for the Saxe Coburgs, but for the last year or two, she has given preference to Darmstadt, whose young espoused in 1852 the Queen's second daughter, the Princess Alice, who died in 1858, leaving five children. "You will marry her sister," quoth the Queen, and the grand Duke of Hesse did not marry the Princess Beatrice, and those who were twenty-eight and Victoria aged twenty-four.

In the first, a miniature by Thomson, we see her with the Prince Albert in arms, in the type of naval uniform substituted for the uniform, at least so her betrothal would be qualified if she were not the sovereign of a great nation. In the second, painted, I believe, from a photograph, she is seated on a garden bench with the Prince

WHAT ROSIE FOUND OUT.

Little Rosie, walking slowly past the verdant meadow sees Many cows, and some are standing, others
lying 'neath the trees.

On the road stands Little Rosie, caring not
for dust or mud,
While her eyes are bent upon these as they calmly chew their cud.

Great surprise her face expresses, for awhile
her lips are dumb;
Then she cries out: "Innamma! Innamma! I al
those cows are chewing the gum!"

THE MAID, THE DUKE, THE GROOM.

"Where is the white horse, my pretty maid?"
For I your hair is a white horse shade."

The maid to whom these words were said
Was a pretty girl whose hair was red.

Twas said in a crowded thoroughfare—
Nearly every kind of a horse was there.

The long line of horses the maid reviewed,
Then to her answer, a real hard dud:

"There isn't a white horse within a mile,
But the dunkey is round," she said with a smile.

The dun grew red, and wished he was dead
"What is your hurry," said sis?" she said.

Merrit will tell: even in strawberry baskets
the bee will rise to the top.

Germany has had three generations of Emperors in three months.

THE PLEASANT WOMAN,

The pen is mightier than the sword, but the cheese is mite-fer than either.

It must be a good brass-band that can play all the airs a drum major puts.

It is said that bold-headed Indians are be

is thought to be responsible.

Judge—Do you know where you will go to, little boy, if you swear to what?—Not to say that boy's wife's sister,"—No, sir;

"Oh, take me, take me away," sings a song in a Boston newspaper. You, take him away. Stand not upon the order of your taking, but take him at once.

How doth the busy little hen
Delight to cluck, I wonder?

To ramble o'er the green beds.

And turn them all to thunders.

A young man who tried to sing bass
Made such a horrid farras,

That the rest of the choir
Arose in its ire.

Afrod him out of the place.

A gentleman met a boy and asked him What o'clock it was. Being told it was just to eat dinner, some said he was safe, as he thought it was more

"It's never any more
in these parts, sir," said the boy simply,
"It begins again at one."

An interesting report of the death of a native was recently made by a coroner's inquiry in India. The native had had the misfortune to be struck by lightning. He was struck by the thunderbolt, and was severed from the earth by the force of the lightning.

The Rev. Mr. Reed of Colorado, who ran as a Democratic Congressional candidate in that state two years ago, was once trumped in the midst of a public prayer
by a man who shouted "Louder!" Reed stopped short, looked at the interrupter, and then said, "I was addressing the Almighty." Then he went on with his prayer.

The highest amount which has been paid
to any retired officer now living is $104,000, received by Gen. J. Robinson since his retirement. The pay and allowances of Admiral Seligford have received more retired than any other navy officer. Since his retirement, in 1866, he has received from the government about $100,000.

During the General Conference many of the delegates presented the vials of Mele
on the part of New York and Brooklyn.
In one of the many fashionable churches of the latter city the fervent ejaculations once
so common are supposed to be entirely eliminated.
One of the visiting preachers, however,
had for one of the spiritual gifts, the power of eliciting the deepest emotion in his audience and, in addressing the Almighty, he was addressing the congregation.

It would appear that the church bell is not a newly-finished institution which made a noise. An agitation had been instituted against it in large towns, and the people who it makes being noted as noise-makers as it annoy the sick and try the nerves of all. A cheap time piece is now found in the homes of all decent people, who are not required to tell the hour by a serviceable revolution army drum is more effective to gather a crowd, but it is thought that public sentiment will reward the removal of both.

WHAT AM I TO DO?

This is a question of the day, and there are two ways to go, either in different individuals to some extent. A man may be a scoundrel, a basest sot.

Too frequently, also, he has an excellent aptitude for pounds but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bear mention, but his hands are not to be denied.

Branches of trees, brick, stings and other

Both Union and Confederate survivors of the battle of Gettysburg have been commemorating that great battle of the American civil war by suitable celebrations on the anniversary of the engagement. It is now known that Mr. K. M. Crook of this town took part in that most bloody battle of the war being present through the three days fight. Mr. Crook served three years in the Union army, serving present at Atlanta, Georgia, during the battle of Richmond, and many other actions.

ROMAN within this story to our nation.
Two stalwarts, one an "admiral" Marine Architecte, the other a "minister" of Confederate State, had a long and eventful voyage to Davey's Island in search of plans, and without being of an amphibious turn of mind, sheltered their boat in a shark's hole, doffed their garments and proceeded into the water. But all was joy and gladness
as far as the two men were concerned.
They had a swim and a dip, and then swam ashore upon the reef in a boat, neither like the "Red Beglede" were they dashed, but came closer and closer as the waves rolled over them, until one of the two swimmers, who had done much impudent and foolish proceeding of the occasion.

ANDREW D. PITTIE.
A. D. Pittie, Esq.,

For while he was of a manly heart
he was a boy. Also, he was a boy when they condemned him to death. He was a boy when he was sent to prison for a year, and if he had been a boy he would have been a boy in the last days of his life.

He was a boy when he remained in their hands, and when they took away the last vestige of existence from him in their clothing, and freedom at the same time.

FIRE AT THE CHEMICAL WORKS

A LITTLE before twelve o'clock, noon, on Saturday morning the alarm was sounded, and started the community. The children were at that time crowded with work, but the sound of the steam whistle soon caused a rapid exit of men who were speedily followed by women and children. A dense column of smoke mounting to heaven easily located the fire in the centre of the town, and soon it was known that the Chemical Works were all ablaze. Arrived at the spot it was at once seen that all hope of saving the doomed building must be abandoned. The fire had gained considerable headway before it was discovered, for in a few minutes after the alarm was given the whole structure from the roof down to the foundation was engulfed in flames, which soon spread to the adjacent buildings.

Before the fire was discovered
it had almost reached the waterfront, but the firemen, who had been almost overwhelmed by the heat, were able to stop its progress.

The firemen, however, were not able to stop the fire, and had to retreat to the rear of the factory, where they were soon
engulfed in flames.

FROM WITHIN

Not by the sea side,
Nor by the swift river,
Nor the stars that sweep thro' waste of heaven
Side by side, nor ever,
For me and ever,
Do we mark man's life with its loss and gain,
Not by the brat's fall,
Nor by the spring rain,
Nor the atoms that drift thro' endless space
Chasing all,
Thou' thy changes remain,
Do we compare man's life with his hap and bane,
Not by the moving twilights,
Nor by things seen,
Nor by the fair light of sun that speeds far
On swift wings,
Nor the wild winds that meet,
Do we time man's life with its dust and day,
But by the strong will,
But by the soul's grace,
By the shining thread night and
Soft and small,
Till they glow in his face,
Do we tell man's life forever and ay.

CHERRY PUDDING.

Wash and stone the fruit; make a light batter with a quart of flour, half a cup of

lard and butter mixed, and a saltspoonful

of salt well rubbed together. Two handfuls of sugar have been provided which have been sifted through the flour and wine.

Not by the sun that beats,

Not by the moon that shines,

Not by the stars that sweep thro' waste of heaven

Side by side, nor ever,

For me and ever,

Do we mark man's life with its loss and gain,

Not by the brat's fall,

Nor by the spring rain,

Nor the atoms that drift thro' endless space

Chasing all,

Thou' thy changes remain,

Do we compare man's life with his hap and bane,

Not by the moving twilights,

Nor by things seen,

Nor by the fair light of sun that speeds far

On swift wings,

Nor the wild winds that meet,

Do we time man's life with its dust and day,

But by the strong will,

But by the soul's grace,

By the shining thread night and

Soft and small,

Till they glow in his face,

Do we tell man's life forever and ay.

THE SECRET OF ECONOMY.

Cap is a great secret of economy; and this

a gift that does not come to all and is

with difficulty acquired. To HANZER'S MAGAZINE

for August, C. H. Farnham, that veteran traveler through the Orient, relates softly handled, shrunken and bruised,

hung by proper loops, in natural folds, not crowded and kept to their distinctive place and pass. Care of the person is an aid in economizing clothing, for nothing is more expensive than to buy clothes that are not well made, and nothing furnishes more rapid marks of deterioration. Care is particularly necessary in the use of gloves, fine

handkerchiefs and such other costly accessories of the toilet as are indispensable—fan

for example.

People who are careless of their own belonging are no less careless of those of others.

I have seen a rich woman borrow a fine fan,

slim it to and fro until she had broken

three of the pearl sticks, then laid it back to the rich man who had given it to her and had borrowed it with the indifferent remark,

"I am afraid I have broken it," but she did not offer to have it mended. Gloves and among the most costly of the minor articles

of attire, because they so soon soil and show signs of wear. But they can be greatly saved

by buying old ones for journeys and times

when hard service is demanded; by the supplementary fastening of buttons before wearing and neatly repairing small breaks.

In fact, if money and a mind are at command, eternal vigilance is the price of well dressing.

Kingston defeated Napanee at cricket last week. Mr. J. E. Strode made a capital score, his bat being styled the neatest ever seen.

It is said that if ever Lord Salisbury's bill for reforming the House of Lords should become law, that Sir John A. Macdonald would be a likely peer.

Mrs. STOTT, of the Napanee Miner, has a call on Monday morning on her way home from Davey's Island where she is spending the summer months.

We are assured that all the boards on the streets were laid longitudinally with the walk, they could not be worn out half so quickly and would be less liable to become damaged.

It is thought that all the subscriptions to the Patriotic Fund will be paid off by the 15th of this month. Let us every one write our names, something like hardship on our namesake subscriptions.

It is estimated on our side underwriters the city of Ottawa, No. 2, will pay the world's money, and we shall have to wait a few more weeks before the original sum works in the treasury of the U. S. D. A.

The regatta was held with great success on Sunday afternoon, June 26th, at the boat club, located on the waterfront. The boats were numerous, up to 100, to take part in the B. & Q. Regatta.

One of the Bellville people who wrote me the recent communications for entrance to High School, and 15 persons, Alan Cowan, only eleven years of age, was one of the successful candidates.

The song service in the Methodist Church attracted a very large congregation last Sunday. The various selections rendered by the members of the choir were of a more than usually interesting character.

WITH a dozen hundred spars along the bay we waited for the arrival of the 142 that removed the power of a 1200 ft. long cable and took the cables and their ends, broken during the removal.

ON Saturday last the sun came from behind the clouds, and the end of the Flour Mill to other fixtures in a manner which made the old structure look like a pile of ruins. A lady on east River Street found the whole neighborhood by fire and smoke.

At a funeral in London, Ont., on Wednesday last, the deceased, a man of 15 years, was not known to any one in Canada. He stated that he had been in the country for some time, but had never been to any place except to America. In this case, the deceased had no relatives, and had no friends, but the relatives were willing to help him.

WHAT AM I TO DO?

The symptoms of Biliousness are unhappy but too well-known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. Too frequently, also, he has an excellent appetite for dinner, but is unable to find room for a meal. His tongue will hardly bear in repose at any time; if it is not white and turned, it is rough, at all events.

The digestive system is wholly out of order and diarrhea or Constipation may be a symptom of the disease. There are often Hæmorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and tendencies in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not cured a country Green's Ayurvedic Flower costs but a trifling sum and thousands attest its efficacy.

Union Lodge, No. 9, A. E. and A. M. Napanee, will meet for the first time in their new hall 20th July. The committee are vigorously pushing forward the final arrangements. More commodious lodge quarters will not be found in Eastern Ontario.

Ayer's Hair Vigor has long held the first place, as a hair-dressing, among the estimation of the public. Ladies find that this preparation gives a beautiful gloss to the hair, and gentlemen use it to prevent baldness and cure humors in the scalp.

No Universal Remedy

has yet been discovered; but, as at least four-fifths of human diseases have their source in Impure Blood, a medicine which restores that fluid from a de-praved to a healthy condition comes as near to a universal cure as any that can be produced. Ayer's Sarsaparilla affects the blood in each stage of its formation, and, is, therefore, adapted to a greater variety of complaints than any other known medicine.

Boils and Carbuncles, which delay ordinary treatment, yield to Ayer's Sarsaparilla after a comparatively brief trial.

Mr. C. K. Murray, of Charlottesville, Va., writes that for years he was afflicted with boils which caused him much suffering. Those were succeeded by carbuncles, of which he had several at one time. He then began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and after taking three bottles, the carbuncles disappeared, and for six years he has not had even a pimple.

That insidious disease, Scorbutus, is the fruitful cause of innumerable complaints. Consumption being only one of many equally fatal. Erptions, ulcers, sore eyes, glandular swellings, weak and wasted muscles, a capricious appetite, and the like, are pretty sure indications of a scorbutous taint in the system. Many cases of scurvy-faced faces are disfigured by pinhead eruptions, and unsightly blotches, which arise from impure blood, showing the need of Ayer's Sarsaparilla to remedy the evil.

All suffers from blood disorders should give Ayer's Sarsaparilla a trial, —avoiding all powders, ointments, antiseptics, and especially cheap and worthless nostrums which will only fail to effect a cure, but more frequently aggravate and confirm the disease they attempt to cure.

The symptoms of Biliousness are unhappy but too well-known. They differ in different individuals to some extent.

A bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater.

Too frequently, also, he has an excellent appetite for dinner, but is unable to find room for a meal.

His tongue will hardly bear in repose at any time; if it is not white and turned, it is rough, at all events.

The digestive system is wholly out of order and diarrhea or Constipation may be a symptom of the disorder.

There are often Hæmorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and tendencies in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not cured a country Green's Ayurvedic Flower costs but a trifling sum and thousands attest its efficacy.

SUNSHINE AND SHADE.

CHAPTER IX.

HIGH-WATER.

Meanwhile, Warren Relf, navigating the remote and ubiquitous little Mad Turtle, had spent his summer congenially in cruising in and out of Essex mud flats and Norfolk broads accompanied by his friend and chum Potts, the marine painter—now lying high dry with the tattered tarpaulin over his head, and the broken tail, just relieved by a hasty royal of gulls and rooks from the last remorse of utter monotony; now working hard at the counterfeited amusement of a great many artless picturesqueness, with floating traces of weed and sea-wrack, in some stranded estuary of the Thames backwaters; and now again toiling and loping on the uneasy bosom of the German Ocean, whose rise and fall would have caused even the most torpid's mind the physical notion that its own included crabs and lobsters had given it a prolonged and serious fit of marine indigestion.

For a couple of hours the sun stretched its arm at their labour of love, painting the sea itself and all that therein is with the eye's creeks, rivers, sands, cliffs, rocks, and ridges, adjacent, in every variety of mood and hue; but the day was given to him, as always, to paint, with endless patience, delight, and satisfaction. They enjoyed their work and it repaid them. It was almost at the payment time that even the like of old Mr. Gull, or Bow Chub, the owner of the Mad Turtle, were not so useful. And now, as September was more than half through, Warren Relf began to be think himself at last of Hugh Massinger, whom he had left in rank despair, and the broken promise of a golden promise to return for him 'in the mouth of the decline of roses, some time between the 15th and the 20th.' So, on a wavy morning about that precise period of the year, with a north-easterly breeze stirring among the North seas and bringing barometers threatening equalls, according to the printed weather report, he made his way out of the month of the Yare, and turned southward before the fowling tide in the direction of Whitstrand.

The sun was running high and splendid, and the two young painters, turned to war and accustomed to danger, thoroughly enjoyed its wild magnificence. A storm to them was a study in motion. They could take notes calmly of its fiercest moments. Almost every wave was a picture, and the hand of the painter in Mad Turtle, with her fat bottom and centre board keel, tossed about like a walnut shell on the surface of the water, or drove her nose madly from time to time into the crest of a bilow, to emerge triumphantly, with a spray of foam and dripping with stickle brine, in the deep trough on the other side. Painting in such a case was of course simply impossible; but Warren Relf, who loved his art with supreme devotion, and never lost an opportunity of improving it from his ever changing model under the most unpromising circumstances, took out pencil and paper a dozen times in the course of the day to preserve at least in black and white some passing aspect of her mutable features. Potts for his part managed to sketch him in the cabin, and Relf, in the intervals of lifting or tacking holding hard to the main-mast with his left arm, and with his left hand just grasping her dry-sailing pad on the other side of the mast, jolted heartily down with his pencil, which in a peculiar form of bilow, happened to be the best model to catch and impress his artistic fancy. It was a glorious day for those who liked it; though a lame lubber would no doubt have roundly called it a frightful voyage.

They had meant to make Whitstrand before night, but were blown down by a current of the river. Warren Relf could never bear to miss interval to delay them. They fell in causally with a North Sea trawler, disabled and distressed by last night's gale, now scudding under bare poles before the free gales that churned and whirled the billows. Relf, in the intervals of lifting or tacking holding hard to the main-mast with his left arm, and with his left hand just grasping her dry-sailing pad on the other side of the mast, jolted heartily down with his pencil, which in a peculiar form of bilow, happened to be the best model to catch and impress his artistic fancy. It was a glorious day for those who liked it; though a lame lubber would no doubt have roundly called it a frightful voyage.

"Look, Relf," he called out in coming toward him, "here's the port bow! I can see our bearings a quarter of a mile off, and tacked abreast for the wind.

The other man looked at it long and steadily. As he looked, the Mad Turtle lurched once more, and cast a reflected pallid ray of light from the masted lamp over the surface of the sea, away in the direction of the port bow. The boat had caught sight at once of some floating whiteness, awayed by the waves, and a pale face, turned in ghastly silence to the unatural starlight.

"Port your helm hard!" Relf cried in haste. "It's a man overboard. Washed off the smoke perhaps. He's drowned by this time I expect, poor fellow."

His companion ported the helm at the word, and all the might. The whaleboat was all astir, and the boatmen, your model are both plowing and tussling together in dirty weather on a loppy chance, I don't believe even Turner himself could make much out of it in the way of a picture. The boat was held hard, and the waves on the bow abated. Warren Relf's casual attention for a single moment by its strange weird likeness to a human figure. At first, he hardly regarded the thing seriously, as anything more than a strange short-hand hieroglyphic some faint idea of the scene past before his eyes, and with a sudden flush he felt convinced as once it was something stranger than a mere plank or fragment of rigging.

"Look, Relf," he called out in coming toward him, "here's the port bow!

The other man looked at it long and steadily. As he looked, the Mad Turtle lurched once more, and cast a reflected pallid ray of light from the masted lamp over the surface of the sea, away in the direction of the port bow.

"It's a woman!" he exclaimed, turning round suddenly. "It's a woman—a lady—dead in the water!"

The billows broke, and curled over majestically with resistless force into the trough below them. Its underflow sucked the Mad Turtle after it fiercely towards the shore away from the body. With a violent splash, it left in her. The boat, which at the last, still held of the corpse by the floating scarf, it turned of itself as the hook caught it, and displayed its face in the pale starlight. A great awe suddenly fell upon the crew. All the men were pale as death, but to the boy, for a moment, it was as if he had seen before. Even in that dim half-light he recognized her.

"Frank!" he cried out in a voice of husked and reverent surprise—"never mind the ship. Come forward and help me." Frank was indeed a woman that he held by the dripping hair—a beautiful young girl, in a white dress; and the was face of one he had seen before. Even in that dim half-light he recognized her.

It would no doubt shock many an actress who considers herself a "star" did she ever by accident happen to read that word backward.

"Speaking of butterflies," said an old master at the Museum "what is he with a mouth there?" And all the wax figures groaned.

"Ah! I'm sadder when I sing." She sang in plaintive key;

And all the neighbors yelled,

"'Ss we are we are we!"

A Troublesome Language is Japanese.

When first the Japanese came into contact with the use of letters they, with little difficulty, made fast the smash—or rather her wreck—with a tow-line behind, and started under all steam, with the tolling smash, as it was growing dusk along the low flat stretch of shore by Dunwich. There was a long, long stretch of the flat sea of the town flat long stretch that pitch the gulls mouth at Whitstrand.

BY DAVID KER.

Our visits to the "Golden Kingdom" of Burma have certainly been filled with an interest equal to the visitation. Tradition tells that during a passing visit to Vienna the old King of Bavaria and several lesser German Princes took refuge from a heavy shower of rain beneath the canopy of a small covered hall, and that one of the ultra-religious journals indulged in some pointed allusion to a noise made outside the hall by "a lot of Kings and other low people had got into the hall." We ourselves have heard and seen a peculiarity of "Kings and other low people" within the last week, for our final voyage down the Irrawaddy was made in the company of five or six Kings and their retinues, who sat in Rangoon was paid to three Burmese Queens. In truth—the small body who played at hunting, and called out that he was not going to be taken in—was a party of robbers. But we ourselves have heard and seen a peculiarity of "Kings and other low people" within the last week, for our final voyage down the Irrawaddy was made in the company of five or six Kings and their retinues, who sat in Rangoon was paid to three Burmese Queens.

In truth—the small body who played at hunting, and called out that he was not going to be taken in—was a party of robbers.

But I must keep the condition of the Queen and the robbers for another time. Moulinne itself being quite enough for one letter. Its proverbial renown as "one of the prettiest places" Burmese "is certainly not undeserved. The first token of its presence in approaching it by sea from Rangoon is

THE SIGHT OF THE NOBLE MOUNTAINS of Pego hanging like a cloud of shadowy purple on the right horizon. Then long, low, black, green ranges of hills along the edge of the blue, shining sea, extending in such an unbroken line either side as far as the eye can reach that it seems as if you were going to sail, like the Flying Dutchman, right into the land. Then a sudden change of the clear green water to a thick, grey brown shows that there must be a river not far off, and a sudden turn around a low, wooded promontory brings your steamer into the mud-bay estuary of the Salween.

But here, however, there is little token of civilization, or of human life in any form, amid the pathless wilderness of thickets that briarries along either bank. Almost the only sign of man's presence is the occasional appearance of a native boat. Then, with a white granite white ribs and the huge white-washed hull that surround them look unpleasantly like the bleached skeles tons of criminal giants who have been tied to trees and left to drown. But, little by little, tiny huts and ledges make their way through the tangled boughs, through the endless tangle of intertwined boughs. Then civilization asserts itself unmistakably in the curling smoke of a huge brick chimney belonging to a timber mill on the right bank. After a mile or two, the Salween turns to the side a little further up, and then a sharp curve of the stream gives us a glimpse of Moulinne in the distance, thronged amid a glittering mass of rivers that come rushing to meet each other through the great palm forest, against whose dark gloom of green while the white peaks of the daintily little town stand out like ivory carvings.

As we glide up to our moorings along the river front of the port many a spigot is turned admiringly from our upper deck upon the great Buddhist temple set like a crown of golden stars over the plain. Directly in front of us comes a few miles away, far up from the impenetrable plain five or six huge masses of dark gray rock masses of hundreds of feet in height, forming a kind of irregular ridge of wall. Their shapes are as extraordinary as themselves. One has the form of a Bishop's mitre, another looks like lying broken out of the earth, while a third displays so perfect an imitation of the towers and battlements of an ancient castle that it is hard to believe them wholly nature's work. To all appearance no living thing could have sprung upon the treacherous soil which bears them. They are as stiff and it is starting enough to see as we come nearer that a tree has fastened its roots into every cleft of the rock, and, though of the whole great natural wall is over perpendicular forest.

There they are, sure enough, the famous "dockyard elephants of Moulinne," whose fearsome heads, though they rear on iron-vanted, are among the standard features of the port. The stories of the dockyards are regularly told for the edification of every new comer to Burma. We are just passing a big timber yard, and among the piled-up logs we can see

of the huge, patient, toiling monkeys moving slowly to and fro, pushing and holding 30-foot beams as easily as we would a newspaper across a table, and laying them one upon the other with a nicely of adjustment which no carpenter could exceed. Moulinne is now the chief centre of this curious industry, for in Rangoon the four-footed workers of the dockyards are now being fast superseded by the stronger power of King Steel.

But the special sight of Moulinne is that strange underground labyrinth popularly known as the "Hell." Forming a well-known part of the population of every true believer in the creed of grottoes that visit Moulinne without seeing it would be as bad as passing through Cairo without going to the Pyramids. The vast, dim, dark, damp, and gloomy caves, the deep, narrow, winding tunnels, the dark, dim, gloomy, and quaint Chinese characters, into the open country beyond—we come upon a high, broad table land, thinly wooded and swept by a fresh breeze, which is very refreshing after the heat, closeness and sickening odors of the natives of the below.

As a master of course we pass three or four-story pagodas—for the Buddhist towns of the East are as emphatically "cities of churches" as Tivoli, and a little further on we come to a Buddhist school, a big wooden building with a high varandah through the open windows of which comes of many voices, suggestive of a free fight; But in reality this general uproar is the strong protest universal silence, it being common in the Buddhist schools of China, Korea, Japan, and Siam for scholars to repeat his lesson at the top of his voice as a guarantee that he is really learning it and not just reciting it. And when the school is over, the pupils, with a noise like the roar of a thousand lions, dash out of the school, and the school is silent again.

And now our carriage comes to a halt upon the brow of a steep, slippery ridge, at the foot of which rolls a wide, brown,

muddy river; and our native courier, Ab sorbed all over them, among which, to my great relief, are the circumscribed letters of English, French, German, and Spanish, the characters of Hindustan, and containing the more prosaic autographs of Europe.

But our sightseeing is not ended yet. Souroon is breakfast over when comes the postman with a mail bag, and with as much excitement as his flat, brown, wide-mouthed face—very like a monkey with a hole through it—is capable of expression. Every digit of his tall, thin, bony body is bent, and he carries a staff, and a rickshaw pole, and a long, thin, sharp-pointed stick, but still curious to see what all this excitement can be about. Does our guide, and on we go, the postman, till just as we are beginning to wonder whether we are going to tramp all day, we find a postman or bound on a walking tour of infinite length into the interior of Burma, this Eastern postman of the Wandering Jews skips up the road, past through the thickets that clothe the lower hill, and vanishes through a dark gap beyond, following him.

It is no easy matter to get down to the water's edge, especially for ladies. Not only are the steps of the wooden ledges that lead down to the water very wide apart, but two or three of them may only be passed by a haphazard leap, giving the leaper a much better chance of drowning.

HARDLUNG DOWN INTO THE RIVER than of safely alight upon the hand's breadth of wet and dirty plank between. But we all get safe aboard the raft at last (though we have been told to go clean inland), and glide slowly across the broad, swift-colored stream.

So thickly do the dark masses of palms and undergrowth bristle along the further shore that until we are more than half way across the river we cannot see the opposite bank, of thatched and bamboo, half buried in clustering leaves, forming the "village" that overlooks this primitive fortress.

RECOMMENDED BY EVERYBODY.*Why You Feel

So weak and exhausted is because your blood is impure. As well expect the sanitary condition of a city to be perfect with defiled water and defective sewerage as to expect such a complicated piece of mechanism as the human frame to be in good order with impure blood circulating even to its minutest veins. Do you know that every drop of your two or three gallons of blood passes through the heart and lungs in about two and a half minutes, and that, on its way, it makes bone and muscle, brain and nerve, and all other solids and parts of the body? The blood is the great nourisher, or, as the Bible terms it,

"The Life of the Body."

Is it any wonder, then, that if the blood be not pure and perfect in its constituents, you suffer so many indestructible symptoms?

Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands "Head and shoulders" above every other Alternative and Blood Medicine. As proof, read these reliable testimonies:

Dr. Brewster, Lowell, Mass., says: "For the past 20 years I have sold Ayer's Sarsaparilla. In my opinion, the best remedial agencies for the cure of the most serious diseases arising from impurities of the blood are contained in this medicine."

Engines J. Hill, M. D., 381 Sixth Ave., New York, says: "As a blood-purifier and general tonic, Ayer's Sarsaparilla I have never found anything to equal Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It gives perfect satisfaction."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla proves equally efficacious in all forms of Scrofula, Boils, Carbuncles, Eczema, Ulcers, Lumbago, Catarrh, &c.; and is, therefore, the very best.

Spring and Family Medicine in use. "It beats all," says Mr. Cutler, of Cutler Brothers & Co., Boston, "how Ayer's Sarsaparilla stands."

A MODERN MIRACLE.

The Indian Empire! the Wonder of the Age. The Indian Empire is not a miracle in the rhetorician's sense, but in the theologian's sense. It is a thing which exists, and is alive, but cannot be accounted for by the process of reasoning founded on experience.

It is like a sealed and floating island of granite, which is a miracle, or a bird of brass which flew and sang and lived on in mid-air. It is a structure built out of nothing, founded on solid butresses, held in its place by some force the origin of which is undiscernable and the nature of which has never been explained. For eighty years at least write a life to the world, it has served to the home of Europe the vastnesses of India, but, so far as can be perceived, they have all failed. The Briton reads what they say, learns up their figures, tries to understand them, and then, like a dog at his master's heels, goes on to follow them to the last, until he finds that what India is—a continent large as Europe, west of the Vistula, and with 30,000,000 more people, full of ancient nations, of great cities, of varieties of civilization, of armories, nobilities, peoples, organic and inorganic, for every purpose from the spreading of great religions down to systematic murder. There are twice as many Bengalees as there are Frenchmen; more than twice as many people as called themselves the whites in the United States; the Marathas would fill Spain, the people of the Punjab with Scholae are double the population of Turkey, and I have named but the more salient divisions. Everything is on a scale which exceeds our power of comprehension.

Then I gave my servants orders to remove the nest from the tree altogether.

There was a pair of the most wanton mischief, and one which threatened the tree's life.

I expatiated with the bird; he would desist from his work and listen, with mock gravity, to the演説 I had finished;

but when I had dig out a fresh piece of the planz and throw it to the rest, spritely a few drops of water upon it.

Being of a different religion, we were given places on the outside of the building.

When the right moment came, the door was

shut, and the chesty or peculiar-shaped vessel filled

with water, the liquid was passed around

among the friends to partake of, and we lightly moistened our lips with it just for appear-

ance's sake, and then I was the only participant in retaining the friendship of the deceased when entering into eternal rest.

FUNERAL AND A DANCE.

Strange Ceremonies at the Pyre of a Hindoo Dignitary.

A correspondent in Bombay writes as follows:—After the Parsee funeral which I described recently we were as- tonished to receive a little box bearing the address of the deceased, sent to us upon opening it found three fist wheaten cakes, wrapped in the fresh leaves of the betel and below, in the Hindostane language, an invitation to a party at the burning cemetery of a high Hindu dignitary. It being extremely difficult to gain admission to the burning cemetery, we felt very fortunate, and in company with an intelligent native who had been invited to the funeral, we were seated to be one of the richest natives of India, and his palatial home bore all the evidences of his great wealth, but the funeral expenses certainly exceeded the amount of the deceased,

and the numberless cases of Canada on similar occasions. The body, dressed in very plain white clothing, was laid on a bier in the drawing room of the residence, and we were invited to gaze upon the features of the deceased, and then to rest, sprinkling a few drops of water upon it.

Being of a different religion, we were given places on the outside of the building.

When the right moment came, the door was

shut, and the chesty or peculiar-shaped vessel filled

with water, the liquid was passed around

among the friends to partake of, and we lightly moistened our lips with it just for appear-

ance's sake, and then I was the only participant in retaining the friendship of the deceased when entering into eternal rest.

BURNING THE BODY.

After the body was carried to the Hindoo cemetery, it was placed on the pyre by six of his friends, and seated on a platform made of light wood and saturated with peacock oil. Two priests, having the red mark of a high caste on their foreheads, set fire to the pyre, with the body devoured by the fiery flames. The widow took charge of the lamp by which the funeral pyre had been ignited and the body was carried to the pyre with the company on the following day, when the remaining ceremonies would be performed. It was said that an interval of some hours was to take place to allow the bold spirits an opportunity to reach the realms of the dead, and yet their anger or the yet unwilling soul that wished.

As witnessing the horrible details of the funeral above described had given such a sombre and melancholy cast to the features

and conversation of the visitors of the deceased, whom as our guide proposed that we return to the largest drawing-room, and he would see to it that the course of our thoughts was changed. His proposal was accepted, and the lighting of the lamps was the signal for the removal of the body, which was armed with a red instrument in the shape of a clarionet, sending forth a volume of sound that even intense regard for the fair sex prevents me from calling music. She marched around the room, and when again opposite to the Adiroondacks, and will be below the eye, she struck a sharp unending burlesque pain; Then prayed to have your steps retarded, And the uncertainty again.

Luxuriant Hair

Can only be preserved by keeping the scalp clean, cool, and free from dust, and the body in a healthy condition. The great popularity of Ayer's Hair Vigor is due to the fact that it cleanses the scalp, prevents it from falling out, and gives it that soft and silky gloss so essential to perfect beauty.

Frederick Hardy, of Roxbury, Mass., a gentleman fifty years of age, was fast losing his hair, and what remained was growing gray. After trying various dressings with no effect, he commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. "It stopped the falling out," he writes; "and, to my great surprise, converted my white hair (without staining the scalp) to the same shade of brown it had when I was 25 years of age."

TEN YEARS YOUNGER.

Mrs. Mary Montgomery, of Boston, writes: "For years, I was compelled to wear a dark cap to conceal a bald spot on the crown of my head; but now I lay the cap aside, for your Hair Vigor is bringing out a new growth. I could hardly trust my sense when I first found my hair growing; but there it is, and I am delighted. I look ten years younger."

A similar result attended the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor by Mrs. O. O. Prestcott, of Charlestown, Mass., Miss Bessie Bedloe, of Burlington, Vt., Mrs. J. Burton, of Bangor, Me., and numerous others.

The loss of hair may be owing to impurities in the blood, or to the action of the stomach and liver, in case of the use of Ayer's Saraparilla or of Ayer's Pills, in connection with the hair, to give it tone and to all the parts of the body. At the same time, it cannot be too strongly insisted that none of these remedies can be relied upon without a persevering and strict attention to cleanly and temperate habits.

The loss of hair may be owing to the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, which is a safe and reliable remedy.
